Contract Is Awarded For New School.

One Time Political Leader Passes Away

Supervisor's Nephew Kills Mother of Eight

START WORK ON NEW BUILDING IMMEDIATLY

The board of trustees of the Redwood City School District awarded the contract yesterday for the erection of the new school building on Duane and James streets. The contract was awarded to E. K. Nelson for the sum of $147,375. Nelson provided a first-class bond which was approved by the board and as his was the lowest of the thirteen bids received, the contract was awarded to him.

Work on the new school is to be started immediately and it is expected by the contractor to have the work completed by the 17th of December. The contract price of the building is slightly under the cost as estimated by the architect, which was $150,000.

CITY BRIEFS

Mrs. Roy Holtz of Pleasantville, Pennsyvania, is expected here on Tuesday for a visit with her mother, Mrs. Ida Corwin. Mrs. Hotz has been in the east for more than five years. She was formerly Miss Helen Corwin of this city.

Mr. and Mrs. William Scanlon of this city and Mr. and Mrs. Joe Nash of San Carlos Gardens spent a few days last week on the Russian river.

A score o flocal Kiwanians gathered at the station Tuesday evening to see John Layng and Harry Groom aboard the train for Memphis, Tenn. The two men are to attend theKiwanis International convention to be held next week in the southern city.

Miss Irene Bradley, girls' physical instructor in the high school, has been spending the week inspecting schools in the southern par of the state to gain new ideas in physical education.

Amog those who enjoyed the week end at earborn Park were Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Kalenborn and family.

Since time immemorial the month of June has been the time for Little Dan Cupid to get busy with his arrows. Prospective brides always put off their wedding until that month, the best of all the year. Nature is then at its very best, with its warm sunshine, flowers and singing birds a dripening fruit. All things look roseate and beautiful to the bride-to-be, so the rush is on. On Wednesday, the first of June Mrs. Elizabeth M. Kneese, the county clerk, issued ten marriage licenses and seven were issued yesterday and during the month cupid in the office will be kept on the jump granting licenses.

Roy W. Cloud was in Pescadero yesterday conductng the examinations in the school there. The examinations here were conducted by J. W. Savage of Colma.

Louis Behrens, well-known assistant cashier of the First National Bank, spent the week-end and holiday vacationing in Glenn and Shasta counties.

Newell Sharkey, who has been acting as salesman for Rice and Hinton, has now gone into business for himself and is opening up a service station on Cypress avenue, San Carlos.

New Bill Hits Duck Hunters

The pot hunters were given a staggering blow during the week when Governor Young signed the bill making it unlawful for duck hunters to use skull boats. Heretofore hunters would skull up a large slough on the banks of which flocks of ducks would be feeding or enjoying a sun bath. An expert skuller would get within fifteen feet of the birds and then rise in the boat and slaughter the fleeing ducks, sometimes as many as a hundred. Market hunters in early days would use large bore guns and kill almost a boat load in two shots. After it became unlawful to sell ducks smaller guns were used and less damage was done. For some time but few birds have been coming to the local marshes so that skulling was partly abandoned but in other portions of the state ducks are killed in large numbers by the use of skull boats. The new law is a good one and it is to be hoped it will be rigidly enforced.

Film At Sequoia Shows New York - Paris Flight

A picture showing the whole story of the attempts for a flight between New York and Paris since Raymond Orteig put up the $25,000 award on which six lives and $1,500,000 have already been spent, will be shown at the Sequoia theatre on Monday and Tuesday, June 6-7.

Featured in this production will be pictures of the heroes who lost their lives in attempting the flight; the wreck of Rene Fonck's plane, killing Jacob Islamoff and Charles Clavier; Capt. Noel Davis and Lieut. S. H. Wooster lost in a trial flight; the missing aviators, Nungesser and Coli; exclusive views of the crash of Commander Richard E. Byrd's plane. Every detail of Charles Lindbergh's heroic flight will be shown from the time he left San Diego to his arrival in Paris.

SUIT FILED IN COURT BY VENDOR OF PEANUTS

Gut Paulos a peanut and popcorn vendor, has filed suit in the court here for damages against George Fabrio. Paulos alleges that on January 15 at Millbrae a car driven by Fabrio hit and wrecked a popcorn wagon belonging to the plantiff. The complaint charges that his stock of peanuts and popcorn was thrown out of the car onto the highway to be eaten by passing motorists, and that he suffered a financial loss due to the wrecking of his wagon and the loss of business which ensued. He asks $496 as a result of the accident.

DAN BURNS DIES AT PALO ALTO; AGE 87

Dan Burns, who once held the political destinies of the State of California, in the palm of his hand, passed away in Palo Alto on Monday at the age of 82.

Burns, after leaving the office of secretary of statet at Sacramento in the early eighties, sought his fortune in the mines of Mexico. There he discovered the famous Candelier mines which brought him great wealth. Burns came back to California and at once became the leader of the republican party. For years he was the absolute boss ruling with an iron hand. At the convention held at Sacrametno in 1894 he sat on the platform of the senate chamber of the capitol building being in compete control and dictated every nomination from governor down to state controller.

There was a big fight that year for the nomination for governor. M. M. Estee, the sage of Napa, a friend of Burn's, was a prominent candidate. There were others, among them E. F. Preston of San Mateo county, and a friend of the Spreckel's faction of the convention. John D. Spreckels made a gallant fight for Preston who maintained a vast estate at Woodside. Of course, Estee secured the nomination after a bitter struggle. After this battle in the convention, Burns was given full sway and he made every nomination.

Owing to the manner in which Estee was nominated and the bitterness engenered he went down to defeat at the general election in November, James H. Budd, the democratic candidate of Stockton, securing the coveted prize. Estee was an able and conscientious man tolerant and noble and accounted the foremost citizen of the state and should have been elected. His defeat was a matter of deep regret, but his overthrow was one way of overcoming the boss, so a good man was sacrificed for an ignoble cause. The remainder of the ticket was elected that year. The Times-Gazette vigorously backed Preston for the nomination, but the odds were against the Woodside man, he receiving only 160 votes in the convention, despite the fact that the San Mateo delegation worked unceasingly for him.

Some years later Burns made an effort to secure the U. S. Senator ship. He had a goodly number of the legislators but lacked about twelve votes in reaching the goal. Henry Ward Brown then represented San Mateo county in the assembly, declined to vote for Burns. It was said at that time that if he had come over to Burns the necessary vote would follow him and Burns would have been elected. Brown withstood every influence from this county and other parts of the state and as a consequence there was a deadlock and no senator was selected at that session. M. H. deYoung was one of the other candidates. He would not budge neither would the other aspirants.

The San Francisco press bitterly fought Burns calling him the republican boss and urging the legislators to purge the state of Burns. Burns might have given way to some other candidate before the legislature adjourned, but for the acrimony and bitterness of the press of San Francisco.

His defeat broke his power and his leadership began to wane and finally he retired from politics.

No man ever held such a sway in the state as did Burns. He was true to his friends, always keeping his promise and sought no material gain for himself, for he was wealthy. He loved the game and his friends, and when victory came he provided for all his assistants and cronies. The loaves and fishes were evenly distributed. He gave his enemies no quarters. If they fought and lost they received no comfort from him. That was the system in those days. Now political leaders placate the enemy so that they may become helpers and admirers at subsequent battles. Not so with Burns, friends were rewarded while enemies were punished. By this means he had a wonderful organization of tried and true friends but in time the system was impaired and the organization destroyed.

Burns was a good man. His word was his bond. His loyalty to friends was admirable.

In the heyday of his power and vast influence he had but to command and his orders were obeyed. Had he passed away then and not at this late day every metropolitan paper would have carried glaring headlines his picture would have appeared and pages of his glorious history and wonderful career by special writers would have been given the public. On Monday only small accounts were published of his death. Thousands had forgotten the once powerful leader and many of the present generation had never heard of him.

It has been ever thus when prestige and power vanishes men are forgotten and often the good that they do is interred with their bones while their short comings very frequently survive them.

FREED OF CHARGE MANSLAUGHTER RESULT DEATH

Edward Hickey, nephew of Supervisor T. L. Hickey of South San Francisco was freed on Wednesday afternoon of a charge of manslaughter as the result of the death of Mrs. Margaret Murray of South San Francisco, who was struck and killed by Hickey's car last Friday night. Mrs. Murray, who was the mother of eight children, was crossing the street to her home when struck by Hickey's car. An inquest was held at South San Francisco on Tuesday.

An inquest was Wednesday. The jury held that the woman's death was accidental.

Mrs. Murray was buried Tuesday from All Souls church in South San Francisco. She was 50 years of age and a native of Ireland.

WASTE ELIMINATION TOPIC OF KIWANIS CLUB SPEAKER

The elimination of waste in government, industry, and social life was the topic of an address before the Redwood City Kiwanis Club Wednesday at the Episcopal parish house. The speaker was George C. oJhnson formerly principal of the Eureka high school, and now director of the research department of the California Council of Education.

Jenson who is an efficiency expert, showed how the saving of waste operated in reducing the cost of living. He emphasized the fact that waste is always paid for, and that whether the public pays in taxes or pays for service or commodities ,it always pays. The waste elimination work of the department of commerce was highly commended by the speaker, who showed that enough money had been saved by the lumber industry alone by following up a waste elimination campaign to run all the schools of the nation for a year.

The chairman of the meeting was Clarance Argo, principal of the Sequoia Union High School.

On Monday evening the Redwood City club will join with the other 1640 Kiwanis clubs in the United States and Canada in celebrating the 11th annual convention of Kiwanis International. This is a simultaneous event celebrated by all Kiwanis clubs at the same time, allowance being made for difference in time in different sections of the country.

Business sessions for the 11th convention of the organization will commence Monday morning and continue until Thursday. Some 5,000 delegates, members and visitors from all over the North American continent will arrive today and tomorrow for the sessions.

Local Kiwanians enroute to attend the convention as delegates are John E. Layng and Harry Groom.

VALUED CHECK IS HELD BY LOCAL BANKER

Through the wickets of the First National Bank of this city, where Edward T. Harrison presides as cashier, pass annually thousands of checks; big checks and little checks, domestic checks and foreign checks, good checks, and alas once in a while a check that is not quite so good and has to be returned to the maker. Every size, color and kind of check in fact finds its way sooner or later through the window of the paying teller of this institution.

But of all of the multitudinous checks that have from time to time entered the doors of the well known bank, there is one that perhaps more than any other is valued by the genial cashier.

This is one he keeps in a little wooden frame and takes a delight in showing it to his friends. This check is a plain little slip of paper drawn on the old banking firm of Messers Coutts Company of 59 Strand, London, but in the lower corner is a signature that makes the check invaluable. It is signed by Charles Dickens.

Dickens drew the check on "ninth September 1867" to the order of Frederick Outby, Esquire for the sum of 150 pounds. It was later cashed at Union Bank, Temple Bar, London, and bears a revenue seal of one penny.

The interesting curio was secured by J. J. Fagan of Woodside while on a visit in England, and was brought by him to his son-in-law, Mr. Harrison.

WOODSIDE

The "Fathers' Night" meeting held last Friday night under the direction of the Parent-Teacher Association was a particularly happy affair. Judge McGrath of San Mateo was the speaker of the evening and gave a very interesting address. Music, cards and refreshments occupied the rest of the evening to the enjoyment of all those present.

Mr. and Mrs. James A. Folger, Jr., will occupy the Folger residence for the semmer. Mrs. Folger, Sr., plans to spend most of the summer at her newly completed residence at Carmel.

Mr. and Mrs. William Lawson of Pasadena were guests this week of Dr. and Mrs. Alanson Weeks. The Lawsons have taken a cottage at Carmel for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Bishop and family arrived at their home here on Thursday and will reamin for the summer months.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Coleman, Jr., have taken the Lawrence Harris place for the summer. Mr. and Mrs. Harris and family will spend the vacation months in Europe.

W. W. Mein has begun the construction of a lodge on the property recently purchased by him from Dr. J. L. Ross. A family home will be built upon the return of the Meins from Europe.

William Macdonald and family have removed from Woodside to San Mateo. They will be missed in Woodside, where they have made many friends during their years residence in this community.

Rev. Benjamin St. John and his niece, Miss Louise Mahon, returned on Wednesday from a trip to the Yosemite Valley.

The first grass fire of the season called out the fire department on Monday evening. It was a roadside blaze on the Avenali property and was quickly controlled by the department.

Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Mighall and Mr. and Mrs. Henry MacArthur motored together to the Yosemite Valley for the holidays.

COPY OF NEW LAW ON MARRIAGE HERE

The new marriage law signed by the governor recently goes into effect on July 29. A copy of the bill arrived in the county clerk's office yesterday. According to the law, applicants for marriage licenses must give a notice of intention three days in advance to the county clerk. Should the applicant fail to appear at the office at the end of that time a new application may be made in thirty days. The law is somewhat vague, needing much legal interpretation. It was passed to prevent so-called gin marriages.

BURLINGAME HIGH SCHOOL ENTERED BY BURGLARS

Sometime Tuesday night burgars entered the manual training department of the Burlingame high school and secured tools with which they were able to open doors to other parts of the building and also to drill into the safe in the office. In the safe they secured $34 in cash. Other losses of msscellaneous articles have been reported. The most serious damage was the wholesale manner in which records and papers of the school were scattered about the office floor.

LOCAL BUSINESSMAN TELLS OF SECRET MARRIAGE

Charles Paul Thiele, well known local business man, and for the past four years manager of Gardiner's haberdashery store in this city surprised his many friends here this week when he announced that he and Miss Beulah Amrein of Oakland were wed on May 4 at Sacramento. The bride and groom had been engaged for about four years and on May 4, accompanied by the bride's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. H. Amrein of Oakland, made a trip to Sacramento, where the knot was tied.

The story of the marriage became known the other day when Mr. and Mrs. Thiele were seen looking at houses in the Emerald Lake section. They are now making their home in a cottage in that district.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

State Controller Ray L. Riley has made public his annual report on the financial transactions of municipalities, counties and the state which shows that these political subdivisions increased their bonded indebtedness $62,616,972.60 during the fiscal year 1926. "Extensive municipal enterprises," declared Riley, commenting on the bonds voted, "confronting several of the larger cities of the state in developing water supplies and possible extension of municipal enterprises would seem to require a conservation of bond capacity. There is no evidence of retrenchment and on the contrary every political subdivision of the state is continually increasing its bonded indebtedness out of line with increased property values."

Full blame for the crash which sent the Golden Gate ferry Golden City to the bottom of San Francisco bay on the night of April 24 was placed on the shoulders of Captain Aanen Johnson, master of the ferry, in a verdict announced by Captain Frank Turner and Captain Joseph Dolan, United Staes steamship inspectors. Suspension of his license for six months, was the penalty imposed on Johnson. He was convicted of negligent inattention to duty in driving his craft full speed ahead through a dense fog. The master of the McCormick steamship Newport, with which the Golden City collided, was exonerated of all blame in the inspectors' report of their investigation.

Fifty-one days of horror and intense suffering in the desert, during which he kept alive by eating reptiles and drinking poisonous water, ended for J. W. Saferight, 59, an oil prospector from Los Angeles, when he was found last week by two cowboys and brought to Santa Barbara. Saferight was looking for some oil shale deposits when he drank from a spring near Los Olivos, 50 miles from Santa Barbara, which is reputed to be poisonous. Within a few minutes the prospector became so ill he swooned. When he recovered consciousness he was too ill and weak to move more than a few feet from the spring and his camping equipment.

One of the famous song successes of modern times, "Lay My Head Beneath A Rose," was written thirty-seven years ago by Grant Falkenstein, veteran musician of Fresno, as part of the score of an amateur minstrel show given in Ventura, Calif. Falkenstein is now the trainer and director of the state champion Sciots' Band of Fresno. Dimly he remembers that he wrote it in a hurry to fill the needs of an amateur bass singer and that the theme was suggested by the dying wish of a young California landscape gardener who in his dying hour asked his friends to "Lay my head beneath a rose." The song has recently been popularized by radio broadcasting.

Returning to the methods of the padres and Indians of early day California, Mr. and Mrs. P. T. Smith of Marysville will construct their country home in Sutter county of heavy rammed earthen walls and partitions. Figuring that such a building is adapted especially to the California climate, the Smiths will have walls 12 to 18 inches thick. The earth, of a proper consistency of clay and sand, while slightly damp is placed in forms, a few inches at a time and tamped hard, additional layers being put on until the required height is reached. Tiling will be used on the roof, which will be of mission style.

Jesse James himself—not a motion picture—has been admitted to the California Bar. Jesse is the original Jesse James' son—the Jesse James whose two guns scared many a stage coach driver out of a year's growth, who robbed and shot, and was slain. The present-day Mr. James has put aside his father's two guns and uses in their stead equally effective, if not as deadly, law books for his persuaders. Attorney James was but 6 years old when a bullet stopped his father's career of banditry. He has practiced law for twenty-five years in the Middle West and is in Los Angeles for his health.

Despite the fact that she is nearing four score years, Mrs. Emma C. Mabie, pioneer Trinity county prospectress, has not given up hope that she will yet find the pot of gold in the mine of which she has long dreamed. But her hopes in connection with the Brown Bear claim, near Deadwood, she admits, have been disappointed. So loading up her pick and shovels on her faithful burro she has departed elsewhere. Mrs. Mabie learned her first lessons in mining at the age of seven from her father back in the fifties.

Hotel construction will boost the Bakersfield building program for May about $65,000. The Bakersfield Community Hotel Corporation has been granted a $100,000 permit for construction of the new $125,000 El Tejon Hotel annex, raising the total for the first three weeks of May to almost $150,000.

Several thousand spectators made the pilgrimage up the sunny slopes of Mount Tamalpais, Marin County, May 22, to witness the performance of "The Gods of the Mountain," the fourteenth annual production of the Mountain Play Association.

San Francisco's municipal vacation camp at Mather in the High Sierras will open officially on June 12, it has been announced by the playground commission. The first unit of vacationists will arrive at the camp on that day, while later units will follow at two week intervals throughout the summer.

The First National Bank of Chowchilla failed to open for business on May 24. A note on the door read that the directors had placed the affairs of the institution in the hands of I. H. Chorpening, Federal bank examiner.

Erection of a new, modern fifty-room hotel at an estimated cost of $65,000 is proposed for Colusa, Colusa County.

Burlingame voters have passed bond issues totaling $210,000 for the purpose of providing the city with adequate fire protection.

California Synod of the Presbyterian church completed its two-day meeting in Berkeley last week and chose Pasadena as the city for the meeting in 1928.

W. H. Sale, California's oldest county clerk, celebrated at Willows last week the completion of his thirty-sixth year in that office. Sale has been county clerk since the formation of Glenn county.

The San Jose Mercury Herald is to build a three-story structure on the site of the old quarters on West Santa Clara street to cost $125,000. It will be steel frame and concrete, and fire and earthquake proof.

Fresno was selected as the 1928 convention city of the California Affiliated Exchange Clubs at the close of the 1927 convention in Sacramento last week. The convention was won when Pasadena withdrew after much discussion.

The Indian death rate in California is greater than the birth rate, according to reports to the State Board of Health for the last year. The records show 283 deaths among the redskins during the twelve months as compared with only 223 births.

Plans for a new home for the First National Bank of Antioch approached realization recently when the bank completed the purchase of a new building site at the corner of Third and G streets. The amount paid for the property was not announced.

Lieutenant Walter J. Ligon, 28, Officers' Reserve, and a student pilot, Ivan L. Hall, 30, were killed May 24, when their airplane crashed directly in front of the hangars at Clover Field, Santa Monica. Eye-witnesses said the wings of the plane collapsed when it was about 2000 feet up.

Bonds of $1,216,376 were passed by the West Stanislaus Irrigation District, by a vote of 52 to 1. The district, which includes 21,000 acres, will spend the sum realized by the sale of the bonds on installation of pumps on the San Joaquin River, and building of a system of distributing canals.

Score another intercollegiate victory for the University of California—this time in the Adonis sweepstakes. Displaying he-man pulchritude, histrionic ability and a certain amount of "it," Richard Miles Clendenin, recent graduate of the State University, has screen-tested his way to a place in the movies.

Lucy Foster Sexton, one of the few remaining "Covered Wagon" babies of California, died in her home in Santa Barbara last week at the age of 74. She crossed the plains in 1854 with her parents when 1 year old. She was the donor of Foster Glen County Park, dedicated to the memory of her parents. She is survived by ten children.

R. B. Hale of San Francisco was re-elected president of the California Development Association of the annual meeting of the board of directors at the St. Francis Hotel in San Francisco last week. At the same time the organization mapped an intensive program of state-wide development of California's natural resources.

Bebe Daniels, well known movie star, has decided to venture into the investment business. Articles of incorporation of the Bebe Daniels Corporation of Los Angeles were filed last week with Secretary of State Frank C. Jordan. It has a capital stock of $500,000 and the directors are the movie star, Phyllis Daniels, and E. E. Morris of Los Angeles.

Rebellious students of the Sacramento High School, who appeared before the city Board of Education last wek to protest against the ousting of Principal John F. Dale, have lost their fight to secure Dale's reinstatement. The protest was lodged by leaders in a student strike, which resulted in more than 1,000 youngsters quitting their desks for a day, several weeks ago.

Governor C. C. Young and M. B. Harris, newly appointed highway commissioner, were the principal speakers at the annual tour of the Sanger Chamber of Commerce organization on Wednesday, June 1st. The newly reconstructed Happy Gap-Sequoia Lake road into General Grant National Park, secured by the efforts of the local chamber last year, were dedicated during the day.

Few bridges on the state highway system of California are capable of carrying the maximum load allowed by law with complete safety, according to a statement made by R. M. Morton, state highway engineer, upon commencing a state-wide survey of highway bridges. The results of the survey, together with probable recommendations, are to be submitted to the highway commission at a future meeting.

Governor C. C. Young prepared the way for placing the statues of two illustrious and representative Californians in the Statuary Hall in Washington, D. C., by signing the bill, providing for the appointment of a commission to arrange for placing the busts of Father Junipero Serra and Rev. Thomas Starr King in the hall. Father Serra was the Franciscan missionary who founded the missions in California, while Rev. King was a Unitarian minister who played a prominent part in saving this state to the Union during the Civil War.

To go to lunch with the ground barren and to come out to find four inches of snow was the unique experience of Postmaster Harold Mcville last week. The lively snow flurry occurred during the noon hour. It did not interfere with traffic on the Placerville Highway in that section.

Gridley will have a new high school building. This was determined when the voters of the Gridley Union High School district voted to issue bonds to the amount of $150,000. The bonds carried by a majority of about four to one.

AND A GOOD STOMACH

Visitor—"So you take almost every cent you get to an old woman in the next block? What a good heart you must have, child." Little One—"Yes, sir, an' daddy says I've a good stomach, too—I buy all my candy there."

Maybe So

"Yes, sir, I think a man ought to be allowed to live his own life."

"So?"

"Yes, sir. And if he chooses a line of procedure that indicates spending part of it in the jailhouse, I think that's his privilege."

Imitation of Bad Luck

Joan—It's an opal ring Mr. Cheapside gave me.

Dora (examining it)—Er—do you like it?

Joan—Yes, but there's that old superstition, you know. I'm afraid it will bring me bad luck.

Dora—Don't worry. The worst this could bring you would be an imitation of bad luck.

A Little Bit Humorous

WHAT THE PAPER NEEDED

"What you want on this paper," said the favored contributor, who was talking over a suggested series of articles with the editor, "is a bishop."

"I beg your pardon," said the editor.

"I said you wanted a bishop on the paper," affirmed the contributor

"What ever for?"

"Well," replied the other, picking up his hat, "from what I've seen of it, there are a number of statements which need confirmation!"

Truthful

Jiggers—I'd like to find out who wrote that anonymous letter about me to the guv'nor.

Friend—What did he say?

"That I was a lazy, worthless scoundrel, an idle, drunken loafer, who spent all my spare time in billiard rooms."

"By Jove! It was some one who knew you!"

THEY COVER THE GROUND

He—I tell you when I walk I cover the ground.

She—Yes, big feet are certainly an advantage in covering the ground.

How It Worked

Mrs. Fuddle—I have had all the furniture and pictures shifted around—they say it is a sure cure for a-headache.

Mrs. Muddle—And did it cure your headache?

Timid

A conversation with an old Dartmoor farmer's wife turned on an empty house in the neighborhood.

"I am surprised," said the visitor, "that such a fine place should stand empty so long."

"Ah, sir," replied the old lady, "it's a fine house, but it's festive with rats."

IT VARIES

"How deep is that piece of property?"

"Well, it measures 50 by 150, and when the tide is in, it's five feet deep."

"For $2 I'll read your mind?"

"Are you a real mind reader?"

"I am."

"Then you should know I haven't that much money."

No More Doubt

Mr. Whitley—So the Franks have a baby now? Well, it will settle one question, anyhow.

Mrs. Whitley——What's that?

Mr. Whitley—As to who is the boss of the house.

Conscience

Stenographer—Shall I end the letter with "Yours sincerely," sir?

The Boss—No; you'd better sign it "Respectfully yours." I said a thing or two I'm none too easy about.

WIDER ROADS FOR MORE CARS

THE American Research Foundation finds that it is becoming a pressing necessity to widen the arterial highways, especially near large cities. In a few years, it declares, we will have 30,000,000 cars and its bulletin adds:

"It is estimated that good roads now save the highway users $750,000,000 a year. Motorists pay the bulk of road building expenses, but probably profit the least by it. Land values have been enormously increased by highways, the benefits extending to farmers in remote sections. With the growth of our cities more and wider highways in their vicinity are a vital necessity, not only for passenger traffic but to facilitate the transportation of food and supplies into the population centers."

In no section of the country is the need of more and wider highways more acute than in the peninsula district. To the north we have one of the largest cities in the west, a city almost surrounded by water, and with only one possible direction for land outlets. It is only necessary to watch the present highways on Sundays and holidays to realize how insufficient they are to meet the demands placed upon them by the motoring public.

The completion of the Bay Shore road and the Skyline boulevard will do much to relieve the situation, but the future will need more roads even than these. A second highway, one that would follow the line of the foothills from San Francisco to Los Altos and include the present Alameda de las Pulgas, would help solve the problem. This would be the most economical route and much of it is already used as a road.

The state highway commission estimates that seven highways will be required for the needs of the future. We hope before long to see one of them following the line of the Alameda de las Pulgas.

RESPONSIBILITY UP TO STAGE AND PRERS

THERE is a wholesome pubic awakening regarding the destructive effect on the public morals of degeneracy on the stage, in books and in the press.

Those responsible for degrading plays obscene books and stories of crime, take shelter behind the excuse that they "have to give the people what they want."

Such statements as well as the practices complained of, offend against decency. No thoughtful parent wants the literary sewage of the stage or press to empty into his home.

Those who exercise in their own narrow sphere the authority to determine "what the people want," in many instances fail to discriminate between that which is instructive, purifying and refining and that which degrades.

Whether the remedy be a vigilant and unrelaxed stage and press censorship, or education of the young to avoid such plays and publications as they would avoid a poisonous reptile or plant, is an open question.

Increasing crime united with relaxing morality to emphasize the social danger.

The stage and the press are alike powerful in molding the young mind to discriminate as between the wholesome and unwholesome moral standards. Possessing this power, society has an unquestionable right in conserving public welfare to demand and command that its influence shall be exerted, not to debase and destroy, but to purify and sustain; not to induce moral decadence, but to animate and buttress social righteousness—The Manufacturer.

"ROOKIES" STORY OF LIFE IN ARMY TRAINING CAMP

Regular Army Officers Act as Technical Advisers to M-G-M During Production

SCENES IN A REAL CAMP

Comedy Shows Beginning of Rookie Through Entire Paces of Military Life

"Rookies," a new comedy just filmed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which is showing at the Sequoia Theatre next Wednesday and Thursday, June 8 and 9, contains the ingredients of education as well as entertainment.

The farce comedy by Byron Morgan, author of many red-blooded magazine and screen stories, was prepared with the assistance of a number of army officers detailed from the regular army to the Citizens' Military training camps held annually in most states of the union.

Not having anything to do with the weaving of comedy romance against the military background, these officers gave to the author technical advice for the production of the story.

The screen tale being completed, these same officers acted as technical advisors during the filming of the picture at the Del Monte training camp, the balloon aviation fields and the studio, where it was directed by Sam Wood.

Army aviators, balloon pilots and observers were used throughout the making of the picture. Regulation army pack parachutes were used for the perilous jumps and the entire balloon sequence, filmed above the clouds over Hollywood, was taken while the great gas bag was under the supervision of competent aeronauts with government licenses.

Every foot of military life, depicting the action of the citizens' military training camp, is the real thing, made before the eyes of the army officers whose duty it is to teach the civilian recruits to learn warfare in peace times.

The Gorgas Idea

GORGAS MEMORIAL INSTITUTE

CONTRARY TO GENERAL OPINION EPILEPSY IS NOT ALWAYS HOPELESS

By E. Bosworth McCready, M. D.
Pittsburgh, Pa.
Member Gorgas Memorial Institute

One of every six hundred of the general population is a victim of what has been termed the strangest disease in history. This estimate includes only those persons subject to habitual severe convulsive attacks occurring at intervals over a considerable period of time. If those subject to infrequent mild attocks, to momentary lapses of consciousness, and to certain other abnormal states were included, the proportion would be close to one in every two hundred.

The modern physician does not consider epilepsy to be a disease entity but rather prefers to consider the epileptic phenomena as a complex series of symptoms indicative of some underlying condition.

The spasms or convulsion of early childhood were long thought to be no particular significance as far as future epilepsy is concerned. It has been determined, however, that the young child, who has had convulsions is five times as liable to later epilepsy as the child who has had none. The epilepsy may develop as late as thirty-five years after the spasms.

Convulsions within the first few days after birth are especially serious as they usualyy denote brain injury. The least serious type of spasms are those that occur toward the end of the first year when the child's nervous system may be in a highly irritable condition because of teething. Repeated convulsions are always more serious than single ones, as are also spasm persisiting for more than a half hour.

A carefu alnalysis by a competent physician should be made of every child subject to spasms as appropriate treatment will often prevent years of suffering and unhappiness. This is true also of convulsions occurring in older individuals. Contrary to general opinion, epilepsy is not always a hopeless condition. Quite often the attacks can be permanently arrested and failing of this the infervals between attacks and their severity may be favorably influenced.

The mystery and pessimism which have so long accompanied this disease have affected both the victims and their friends and have prevented, to a large extent, the seeking of proper medical advice and the conscientious and persistent following of such when it has been sought. Relief, entire or partial, is only to be obtained by consistent effort over a considerable period of time, not days and weeks, but months and possibly years.

There is no disease condition which requires more patience and cheerful optimism on the part of physician and patient than does epilepsy. For certain cases, because of lack of response to treatment, unusual severity or frequency of attacks, accompanying mental disorders, or impracticability of home care for other reasons, instiutional care is imperative.

The routine institutional life with the opportunity it affords for companionship and for occupation suited to the capacity of the indivdual furnishes a desirable environment for these unfortunates.

CLEANLINESS IS NEXT TO GODLINESS

By Beverley R. Tucker, M. D.
Richmond, Va.
Member Gorgas Memorial Institute

Life is hazardous. Certain hazards have, of necessity, to be taken but certain others can rather easily be avoided, and at times it is as much or more our duty to avoid as to take hazards. Which hazard to take and which to avoid depends largely upon our individual judgment backed by observation, experience, and advice.

Our homes for incurables, our alms-houses, our hospitals and sanatoria, and not infrequently our homes are in a large per cent filled by victims of hardening of the arteries, chronic joint inflamations, chronic neuritis, and chronic nervous and mental conditions which could easily have been prevented or cured in their incipiency. The cause of these distressing conditions is infection.

A harmful germ should be considered an enemy to the human race and should be combatted by preparedness and attack.

Preparedness consists of the regular use of the tooth brush, gargling the throat with antiseptics, the avoidance of contact with people who have infectious diseases, the habit of coughing and sneezinp into one's handkerchief, frequent bathing, the washing of the hands or clothes that have come into contact with filth or infection, and physicians's attention to colds, sore throats, skin sores and boils, pains in the chest, abdomen, bladder, or rectum.

When an infectious disease of any character develops then the patient should go to bed, send for the best physician possible, and not get up until the physician says so.

Our motto should be to avoid infections by every reasonable means, chase them to their source, and correct them in their early stages when they do occur. This for the individual is what Walter Reed did for Cuba and Gorgas did for Panama. Today Havana is one of the healthiest cities in the world instead of being a plague center, and Panama is a health resort instead of a seat of pestilence.

WOODCHOPPER GETS SIXTY DAYS

Joe Garrido, 49, a Merican wood chopper, residing near Five Points, began serving a 60-day sentence in the San Mateo county jail Saturday, after being sentenced by Justice of the Peace Ray Griffin.

Garrido was charged with battery by Mrs. Garrido, who received injuries about the head and eyes when seevrely beaten by her husband a week ago.

When questioned by Judge Griffin Garrido claimed that his wife had blackened her own eyes in order to get the charges against him. The alibi did not find favor with the judge.

27 YEARS AGO

June 2, 1900

There was quite an exciting runaway on First street yesterday.

Walter Welch stopped over for a couple of hours Saturday to see friends here.

Miss Bee Fox of San Francisco spent a few days this week visiting old friends in Redwood City.

Sam Cronk's new sign painted by Mr. Gardner of Woodside, is one of the finest in the county.

Ralph Gibson of San Francisco visited his brother-in-law, George Mitchell, Decoration Day.

A bus load of young people of this city will leave this morning for Pescadero to attend the Chamorita there tomorrow.

Harvey Ross, who is attending the Cooper Medical College, is spending his vacation in this city.

Property owners on Phelps street are taking up the old sidewalks and making ready to put down cement sidewalks. The town trustees should see that it is done all along the street.

Ed Barry, the truck driver for Cullen's feed store, in coming down the Woodside grade Monday the team ran away, throwing him out. He was badly bruised, but fortunately no bones were broken.

Hjalmar Holmquist has been confined to his home for the past two weeks. He is now improving and will soon be himself again. Hard study for the examinations at Stanford was responsible for his illness.

Leslie Johnston successfully passed the English examinations at Stanford last week. This examination is the bug-bear of all who wish to enter Stanford, and Leslie is to be congratulated on having passed.

County Surveyor Gilbert is engaged in preparing a new map of the rural district for Postmaster Lovie. The district includes all the territory between Selby Lane, near Fair Oaks and the Whipple road.

The town's delinquent tax list will be published in this issue of the Times-Gazette. It contains only one name and the total amount delinquent is only $1.40. It is the smallest list ever published and there is perhaps no town in the state with as small an amount of delinquency.

It is understood that work will be commenced shortly to build an additional line of track on the broad-gauged road between San Jose and Bayden. Some 500 small real estate transactions in Santa Clara, San Mateo and San Francisco counties indicte the establishing of a right-of-way.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Demented Michigan Farmer Dynamites a School, Killing Forty-Four.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

ONE of the most extraordinary and shocking crimes of recent years was committed at the little town of Bath, near Lansing, Mich., resulting in the death of 44 persons, 37 of whom were children, and the injury of some forty others. Andrew Kehoe, farmer and school district treasurer, his mind unbalanced by financial troubles which he laid to the necessity of paying school taxes, planted a big dynamite mine in the basement of the community school, wired it carefully, carried another load of explosive to the building in his automobile and set both off. The north wing of the school was destroyed and the ruins were full of the shattered bodies of the little pupils. The principal and one teacher also were killed, as were two men who were passing the building. Kehoe himself was among the dead. Before blowing up the school he had killed his invalid wife and burned his own house and farm buildings. State troopers from Lansing, who took charge of the situation, found in the basement of the undestroyed wing of the school dynamite planted in eight places. Had this been exploded the death roll would have been doubled. Hundreds of pounds of the explosive had been stolen recently from a contractor's store house, presumably by Kehoe, and the plot had been worked out carefully during a number of days by the insane farmer, who was considered to be an expert electrician.

PROTECTION for the Mississippi valley from future floods will be demanded and planned at a great conference of representatives of the 27 states, called by Mayors Thompson of Chicago, Miller of St. Louis and O'Keefe of New Orleans. The meeting will open in Chicago on June 2 and will be attended by senators, congressmen, army engineers, bankers, lumber trade members and other business leaders. Secretary of Labor Davis will represent President Coolidge.

Secretary of Commerce Hoover has told the President a special session of congress is not necessary to deal with the flood situation, as the Red Cross will be able to care for the refugees efficiently. The relief fund is still growing, and the continuance of contributions is urged. Last week the most serious development was the inundation of the town of Melville, La., on the west bank of the Atchafalaya river. The waters broke through the levees during the night and about ten of the inhabitants were drowned. The rest took refuge on the levees, where they soon were isolated. The Bayou des Glaises levees gave way, as was expected, and hundreds of persons in that section, northwest of New Orleans, were driven from their homes.

The Mississippi fell slowly along the lower river, the weather bureau at New Orleans estimating that half of the water from the Tensas basin was being diverted into the Atchafalaya basin through the crevasses. The crest of the flood still was in the Tensas basin, far above Bayou des Glaises.

VIOLENT storms in Iowa, Illinois and Indiana in the middle of the week caused some loss of life and the injury of many persons, especially in Peoria and Indianapolis. Rain, hail and wind resulted in severe property loses.

Eight lives were lost when a wall of water from what is known as the "slide" dam in the Gros Ventre river swept over the little town of Kelly, 25 miles from Wilson, Wyo. The dam, created when Sheep mountain shifted several feet two years ago, had collapsed.

SEVERAL thousand members of the American Medical association attended the seventy-eighth annual meeting of the organization in Washington, and were welcomed by President Coolidge. The house of delegates of the association directed the trustees of the organization to co-operate with the internal revenue department and the Treasury department in the preparation of a bill to be submitted to congress in December, modifying the "unfortunate" Volstead act provision which now limits the amount of whisky which may be prescribed to one pint in ten days.

Among the important announcements made before sectional meetings was that of Hideyo Noguchi of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, that he had at last succeeded in isolating the micro-organism responsible for trachoma, an eye disease that has baffled physicians. Dr. William S. Thayer of Baltimore, Md., was elected president of the association.

ILLINOIS lawmakers took another swat at prohibition when the house of representatives voted, 79 to 64, to submit the repeal of the state prohibition act and the state search and seizure act to a referendum of the people. The expressed view of some of the members who voted for the referendum was that prohibition has been worse than a failure, a sumptuary regulation that has brought more harm than good to society, to the nation, and to the state. The drys put up a strong fight and argued well, but were outvoted. Several weeks ago the Illinois house adopted a resolution calling upon congress to call a constitutional convention for the purpose of revising the eighteenth amendment.

Vacating a disbarment order against a Nebraska lawyer, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals at Kansas City held in effect that the manufacture and possession of liquor for personal use in the home is not a felony and cannot serve as ground for disbarment of an attorney. The decision said that "a court has no regulatory power over the private life of a member of the bar."

DISARMING the warring Nicaraguans is turning out to be not all play for the American marines who have the job in hand. At La Paz Centro, near Leon, a guerilla band of Liberals attacked a small detachment of the marines and a battle ensued in which Capt. Richard B. Buchanan and Private Marvin A. Jackson were killed and several other leathernecks wounded. About fourteen of the "Liberals" were killed. Brig. Gen. Logan Feland said: "I am glad to state this marine detachment, under most difficult circumstances and although outnumbered ten to one, has upheld the reputation of the marine corps. Captain Buchanan and his detachment showed bravery of the highest order."

GREAT BRITAIN and Russia were on the verge of a break last week, and the rupture of relations was expected almost any day. The Soviet government made a formal and indignant protest against the raid on the Soviet trade headquarters in London, declaring continuance of commercial relations with Great Britain was possible only on the condition of exact fulfillment of the provisions of the commercial treaty of 1921, free from violations growing out of "interparty maneuvers and the fantastic beliefs of one minister or another." Furthermore, Moscow declared it reserved the right to make claim for violation of the agreement by the British government, for the insult offered thereby and for material losses growing out of the raid. The note concluded:

"The absolutely, uncalled for raid on a government institution of another state, apart from the question of treaty rights belonging to it, is a most serious and hostile act, without doubt jeopardizing the further preservation of relations between the interested states, with all the ensuing consequences. The fact that the trade delegation by its activity gave no justification for such a raid can be proved by the circumstance that the British government has not made a single representation or complaint about this activity."

The official version of the raid was given in the house of commons by Sir William Joynson-Hicks, home secretary, and a debate on the question involving relations with Russia began. The documents found by the police have not been made public, but there was reason to believe they were decidedly incriminating. The government officials prepared three notes as replies to the Russian protest, the choice depending on the decision of the cabinet and the parliamentary debate. One of them denounces the trade agreement on the ground of its flagrant violations by the Russians. The second says a final break off of diplomatic relations between Britain and Russia must come if the Soviets do not amend their conduct. The third announces a direct break of diplomatic relations immediately, laying the whole blame on Moscow.

The Russian government already has played a strong card in the quarrel by announcing the grant of special trade privileges to Germany, Latvia and Lithuania, which states have signed or initiated neutrality treaties with Moscow. In the Soviet capital there were carefully staged demonstrations against the English trade mission, the members of which were so closely guarded by political police that they were virtual prisoners.

BRITISH officialdom was very busy entertaining President Doumergue of France and Foreign Minister Briand, who made a state visit to London. There were banquets, parades and other colorful functions, and Briand and Chamberlain took the opportunity to hold an important conference concerning immediate evacuation of the Rhineland.

NAVAL experts of England say their government has decided to propose, in the Coolidge naval conference, the reduction of capital ships from 35,000 to 20,000 tons and cruisers from 10,000 to 6,000 tons, apportioning a tonnage of 100,000 tons each to the United States and Great Britain and 70,000 tons to Japan. According to the Daily News expert, Japan has decided to back this program.

TWO editorials in Osservatore Romano, organ of the Vatican, express the pope's opposition to Mussolini's charter of labor and the Fascist doctrine which places the right of the state above the right of the individual and practically denies that individual rights exist when important necessities of the state are involved. The relations between capital and labor, according to the doctrine expounded in the editorials, are ethical problems and as such must be approached, discussed and solved on the basis of ethical principles which "the centuries old experience of the church and its superhuman knowledge dictate."

Mussolini sought to demonstrate his friendliness to the church by having placed in the Colosseum a gigantic cross, which was unveiled by Queen Elena at an impressive ceremony. This cross replaces the one torn down by Mayor Nathan 65 years ago, and its dedication completes the Fascist plan to return this Christian symbol to the schools, courts, and public buildings, from which they were removed during the anti-Catholic days following the unification of Italy.

TWO well-known figures in the amusement world died last week. Sam Bernard, German dialect comedian, who was on his way to Carlsbad, succumbed to apoplexy on board the liner Columbus. Maurice Mouvet, known the world over as just "Maurice," noted ballroom dancer, died of tuberculosis in Lausanne, Switzerland. He had been ill for several years but did not quit his work until two months ago.

GOVERNOR GENERAL WOOD has dealt successfully with another dangerous affair in the Philippines. Entrancherado, an insane fanatic, started a revolutionary movement on Panay island and was joined by a large number of followers. Wood went there himself and persuaded the excited natives to disperse, and their crazy leader was sent to an asylum in Manila.

EXPOSURE of the alleged corruption of Indiana politics by the Ku Klux klan was furthered by the arrest of Mayor Duvall and Controller Buser of Indianapolis on charges of conspiracy to commit a felony. Duvall is accused in six other affidavits of violating the corrupt practices act, perjury, and other offenses.

Age Declared No Bar to Further Learning

A man or woman under fifty years of age should not allow themselves to be discouraged from trying to learn anything which he or she really needs to learn by the fear of being too old, Dr. E. L. Thorndike, professor of educational psychology at Columbia university, declared at a recent meeting of the American Association for Adult Education. To a lesser degree this is true after fifty years, he added.

Doctor Thorndike presented results of experiments in which persons thirty-five years and over, averaging forty-two years, were compared with persons twenty to twenty-four years old, averaging twenty-two, in their ability to learn acts of skill and acquire various kinds of knowledge.

In learning reading, spelling, arithmetic and other elementary school subjects, adults of forty-two progressed about five-sixths as fast as the adults of twenty-two. Both groups probably learned faster than they would have learned the same things as children at the age of twelve, Doctor Thorndike said, for they learned more per hour of study than children comparable to them in brightness are able to learn.

"Extensive experiments with adults learning algebra, science, foreign languages and the like in evening classes and with adults learning shorthand and typewriting in secretarial schools, support the general conclusion that ability to learn rises until about twenty," he stated.

Fleabite Plea Wins Moran $2,000 Purse

Paul Moran of New Orleans fought Kid Kaplan at New Haven three years ago. The boxing commission held up Moran's part of the proceeds, $2,000, claiming he did not try to fight. A bill providing that Moran be paid in full has been passed by the house of representatives. Moran claimed he had been so harassed by flea bites the night of the fight that he had been kept busy scratching and did not have time to give his best efforts.

Bob Is Big Boy Now

Having passed his twenty-fifth birthday, Bobby Jones believes he is old enough now to exchange "Bobby" for just plain "Bob."

He confessed a desire to be called "Bob" to a Chicago golfer who has just returned from the South. "Bobby," he said, "is too kiddish."

Sunday Golf Now Is Favored by Women

Women members of the Baildon Golf club of England have voted in favor of Sunday golf. They held a meeting recently, separate from the one held by the men, to discuss the question of playing on the Baildon moor on Sundays, subject to the approval of the Bradford city council.

Only 25 per cent of the women members voted against the proposal. The men also voted in favor of the resolution, the vote being 52 to 40. The meetings were held following many arguments over the Sunday playing question.

WORKED PLAY TO GET TWO RUNNERS

Trick Had Much to Do With Phillies Winning Flag.

A play originated by Pat Moran and practiced by the Phillies during the season of 1915, when it doubtless had a lot to do with the winning of the National league pennant by the Phillies that year, was the retiring of two runners, instead of one, when a player is trapped between the bases on a grounder to the infield. In this play, with a runner on second, when the batter hit a grounder down to the infield that permitted of the runner being trapped between second and third, it always has been the practice of the runner to jiggle up and down the base line as long as he can in order to give the batter a chance to advance to second while the runner is being retired.

The way the Phillies played it was to let him "jiggle" and prance up and down the base lines without any effort on their part to retire him until the batter, racing around to reach second, was nearing that base. Bancroft always fast at tagging runners, would plant himself on the second base bag, and the other infielders, apparently trying to retire the runner caught between second and third, would run him back toward second. Seeing the batter nearing second, they would then give the runner they had trapped a clear field back to second and toss the ball to Bancroft, who would tag the runner sliding back into second then turn quickly and also tag out the batter racing down to second from first.

That play was always successful for the Phillies so long as the batter had advanced too far toward second for him to get back safely to first without himself being trapped or tagged out.

University of Kansas Has Two Cage Captains

V. G. Burton '28, star guard, and J. J. Hill '28, forward, will hold the captaincy of the University of Kansas basket ball team jointly in 1928. Both players were elected at a banquet held here recently in honor of the championship Kansas team. Burton was second high scorer of the Crimson and Blue team this season. Hill, while not a regular the past two seasons, plays a fine brand of basket ball. This is the first time in the history of the school that a basket ball team has had two captains. Chancellor E. H. Lindley announced the members of the championship squad who won letters the past season are: Capt. G. H. Schmidt '27, Albert Peterson '27, G. E. Gordon '27, Hill, Burton, B. S. Jeffrey '28, C. F. Newland '28 and R. W. Maney '29.

Opposes High Prices

William Muldoon (shown in photograph) the iron man of the New York Athletic commission, says that $25 will continue to be the maximum charge permitted for ringside seats to fights in the empire state.

That means the next fight in which Gene Tunney takes part in the East will be held at the Sesqui stadium, Philadelphia, says a writer in an exchange. Rickard cannot afford to handle such a show at Yankee stadium for that low limit. He can't afford the high cost of fighters.

Queer country where, with 90,000 seats under $25 top price, one can't afford to pay off the principals in the show and still make a profit.

O'Farrell's Tough Job

The consensus of the National league managers is that Bob O'Farrell has the hardest job bequeathed any major manager. "For O'Farrell to be a success, and keep pleasing the fans, he cannot afford to drop lower than third at any stage of the race," says one pilot. "His club isn't as strong as believed, and no team can lose so great a player at Hornsby and not have trouble filling the gap, with even so clever a man as Frankie Frisch as substitute."

MRS. BASSETT ALWAYS TIRED

Now in Good Health by Using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Lansing, Michigan.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound whenever I needed it. When I first used it I was so bad I could hardly walk across the room without crying. I was tired all the time. I think my trouble was coming on me for six months before I realized it. I read of your wonderful medicine in the paper, and * * * my husband bought me a bottle, and after the first few doses I felt better, so kept on taking it until I was well and strong. I take it at times when I feel tired and it helps me. I will always have a good word for your medicine and tell anyone what good it has done me. I recommended it to my neighbor for her girl, who is sixteen years old, and it was just what she needed. She is feeling fine now, and goes to school every day."—Mrs. E. F. CHAPTER XIII—Continued

Selwood was already in Scott's rig. "Nothing is sure, John," he retorted amiably. "When my time comes, it comes."

"As McAlpin would say, you're talking like a blamed fool, John," rejoined Lefever.

Pardaloe grunted. "I'd say you're talking like one yourself, John Lefever, if I didn't owe you sixty dollars. That is," he mumbled, "if you think you can make Selwood change his mind by talking to him. If you're ready," he snapped at Selwood, looking around for his trusty shotgun, "let's go."

Selwood led the way out of the harness-room through the office and down the dark gangway to the back door of the barn. Lefever, still persisting in protest and caution, fastened the door behind the four men.

Separating as they left the barn, Pardaloe and Scott, and Selwood and Bull Page—a definite rendezvous named—worked their way down-town. Surprised at the lull in the fighting, they could only surmise that the Vigilantes were still at bay, with the gamblers still celebrating their victory.

The men stationed outside to guard Bartoe's place, the remaining resort on the river front, offered little impediment to a reasonably close approach. But Selwood, on one side, worked his way between the guards and the building, only to find that some one had sensibly drawn every window curtain and where there were shutters had closed every shutter.

Selwood joined Pardaloe where the latter awaited him on the river bank. "They've got it well hooked up, Bill," he said, looking toward the lone building where all was darkness save when a streak of light shot from the front door as it was opened. "I counted five men outside."

Pardaloe corrected him. "Count four now," he said with a certain grimness. "Rolled one of 'em down the river bank."

"You didn't kill him?"

"Choked him a little, that's all. No," he repeated indignantly, answering a second pointed question, "I didn't kill him. He's just gagged, and tied up tighter'n a bull's eye in fly time. If he wasn't fool enough to roll plum into the river when I started him he's all right. Now, speakin' of plans: I've got 'em laid out for this place, John."

"What are they?"

"Why, simple; I'll fire the back of the place and you pick 'em off when they run out the front. What?"

"Bill," said Selwood impatiently, "I don't know who's in there. If I did I'm not a public executioner. I'm not a Vigilante. I'm just a plain gambler—not a butcher. And how," he continued, overriding Pardaloe's indignation, "do I know Starbuck isn't holding Christie Fyler or her father prisoner in there?"

Pardaloe drew a breath. "To tell the truth," he confessed, "I didn't think about her; the old man wouldn't make so much difference."

Selwood regarded the dim, forbidding outline of the tightly closed, ill-favored joint with half-closed longing eyes. "Before we do anything else, I'm going to take a look inside. I want to see just who's there—and what they're doing, Bill. We can talk a plan over afterward."

Pardaloe put some useless warning and much fervent scepticism into one ironical word, "Maybe!"

"Of course it's only 'maybe,'" admitted Selwood, not unamiably. "Got any whisky with you, Bill?"

Pardaloe, after having so lately declared that no one could budge Selwood in his decisions, tried vainly to dissuade him from the undertaking. It was hopeless, he knew. But there was one thing Pardaloe could do—that was, obey orders.

A few minutes later, a man much under the influence of liquor, if one's nose could be trusted, for he strongly smelled of it, approached unsteadily the front door of the Bartoe place. In size, but in no other way, he resembled Selwood. Near the door two men demanded his business, denied him entrance, and when he staggered toward the door itself, insisting he would have a drink, one of the guards, seizing him by the throat, threw him with brutal indifference backward into the street, where he fell prone and lay muttering to himself.

Presently he began to sing somewhat uncertainly a teamster's song. But the more he sang, the better, apparently, he liked the idea, for the longer he sang, the louder he sang, much to the annoyance of the truculent guard, who finally strode toward him with a curse to silence him—failing in his eagerness to note that the drunken man now lay much farther out in the street than he had been thrown. In the darkness he reached the object of his wrath, lying prone, and tried to kick it into silence. Beyond that point of the action, he had, afterward, for some time but the haziest recollection. His foot was caught in the air, he was snapped violently backward, and before he could utter even a warning cry, his head struck the ground like a stone. Two minutes afterward, still unconscious, he lay gagged and bound, stripped of his two guns and hat and coat, and rolled to one side into the ashes.

The guard at the door had fared in the brief interval rather worse than better. Pardaloe timed his action to the thud he heard when the singing stopped; slinking up from behind like a mountain lion, he clapped one big hand over the second man's mouth, and with his other hand caught his victim's wrist in a vise; the next moment he had doubled him up in a bear hug and choked him into complete silence.

When the men were secured, Pardaloe dragged his prisoner, bound, around the corner of the building, arrayed himself, as far as he could get into them, in the accoutrements of his victim. Selwood, his face smeared with ashes, ran up. Not losing a moment, he whistled into the night for Bull Page, who, across the street, was awaiting his signal. "Now, Bull," he murmured, as the old man hastened to him, "for a look at the inside!"

Bull caught hold of the iron latch-handle and pulled at the door. It resisted. Either bolted or barred on the inside, his efforts made no impression on it.

"Stand aside, Bull," said Selwood. He tried the latch, in turn, and, using more force when less failed, jerked at the door violently; still unsuccessful, he pounded on it with his fist.

A watchman within unbarred and opened the door a few cautious inches. Selwood, under the hat of the fallen guard, thrust forward his head. "It's Bull Page. Let him in! He's got a message for Starbuck."

The watchman took no chances. "Hold on," he exclaimed gruffly, and at once slammed the door shut and barred it. While Selwood waited his return—with perhaps more impatience than Bull, who must have felt that to oblige a friend he was taking a good chance of getting shot—the watchman took counsel. He opened the door again presently and with the same caution. "Come in, Bull."

Selwood in the interval had thrown away the guard's hat and put on the extra cap pulled from one of his numerous pockets; and when the watchman opened the door wide enough for Bull to enter, he attempted to walk in behind him. The vigilant guardian pushed him out again. "No, you don't—"

Bull raised his quavering voice. "Hit's all right—he's my partner—"

"Keep out!" exclaimed the watchman, shoving Selwood roughly back as he tried to edge through the half-open door.

"But he's got news Starbuck wants," persisted Bull, to whom the thought of entering the wolves' den alone was much more repugnant than that of making an appearance under the wing of a man who could at least shoot if shot at.

"No, you don't," persisted the doorkeeper with a truculent aspect. "You come in, Bull Page—nobody else." With that, he jerked Bull in by the coat collar, and banged the door in Selwood's face.

The gambler took the rebuff impassively. Bull had his instructions: he was to tell Starbuck Selwood wanted to see him at the barn—and was likely to get rough handling for his pains. Outside the evil joint, Selwood felt he held at least one portal and could afford to wait.

But he was beginning to count Bull's effort a failure and was trying to devise a new scheme when, after what seemed a long interval, the door was opened again. Selwood, as he saw Harry Barbanet coming out, followed by Bull Page, slunk into the shadow. Barbanet, sober, alert, suspicious, was the one man in the place that Selwood had most hoped not to encounter, for none, he felt, of the wolves within would so quickly penetrate his rude disguise. As the two men emerged, he retreated.

Bull looked vacantly around in the darkness as if to get his bearings. "He's here," declared Page in his trembling voice, trying as he spoke to penetrate the shadows. "I know that much; or was a minute ago—he'll help, if I c'n find him."

"You won't need any help," insisted the busy bartender, scornfully. "They're all locked up together right inside here, back of the barber shop. Get old Fyler out the back door, tell him you'll help 'em get away, him first. He'll go out with you because he knows you—all you've got to do is, throw him into the river. Starbuck wants to get rid of him—you'll get paid."

"The old man's wiry," objected Bull, spinning out the talk. "I want my partner outside the back door, so the old man don't throw me in. Of course, I'll try it alone if you say so, but if my partner—"

An outburst from Barbanet cut short the talk; Bull had said all he wanted to say, anyway. But, still maundering on, he was unceremoniously pushed through the partly open door back into the room. Selwood slipped around the corner to where Pardaloe, close to a window, was impatiently awaiting action. Selwood repeated what he had heard, directed him to watch the back door of the barber shop, take any necessary measures, and to detain Fyler till Selwood could get back to him.

"Say the word," said Pardaloe, "and I'll fire the whole dashed joint. I've got everything laid right here, and good tinder to do it with."

"Don't set this place on fire till we get everybody out of it," exclaimed Selwood. "I must see the inside of the place. I can't plan anything in the dark."

"Here's a sash loose," mumbled Pardaloe, balked of his prey, "right here. Why don't you—"

Selwood, knowing the general layout of the inside of the big room, jumped at the chance. "There's a curtain in front of it," continued Pardaloe.

"Out with the sash," said Selwood instantly. "Easy, Bill."

It needed no more than the prying off of a sash-stop, which Pardaloe managed with the blade of his bowie-knife, without making much noise. He lifted aside the sash. A curtain, tacked up inside, covered the window opening; and while Pardaloe noiselessly set down the sash, Selwood caught an edge of the curtain in his fingers and peered inside.

It looked like a fair chance. The corner was not dark, but it was not brightly lighted. A table stood close to the side of the window through which Selwood was looking. On one side of the table sat a man leaning forward, with his head buried in his arms, as if asleep. His hat lay on the table. Selwood watched him pretty closely for a moment—he was the nearest element of danger — but reached the conclusion he was stupid with drink. The curtain was short. Hung from hooks at the upper corners, it reached only to the window apron. Selwood could see men standing in small groups not ten feet away, but the entire room, probably for reasons of safety, was only meagerly lighted.

The gambler thought he could make it. He whispered brief instructions to Pardaloe.

"If you don't hear any shooting, Bill, you'll know I'm moving safe. If you hear one shot, just pay no attention. Have your shotgun up here on the sill; the instant you hear two shots, fire one barrel at that big lamp." Selwood pointed to the lamp hanging in the front end of the room. "Let the other barrel go into the middle of the crowd—that will give me a chance for the front door."

"John, I might hit y'," objected Pardaloe in a ferocious whisper.

"If I'm in that crowd, Bill, after two shots are fired, a few buckshot more or less won't hurt my feelings," said Selwood reassuringly. "Just let go quick at that lamp—that's the main thing. I'll make what noise I can with my gun to help you out. Now set down your gun and give me a lift—I must get in there with my back to the window and both hands free."

The mule boss took him under the armpits, that Selwood's hands might be free, lifted him, and the next moment Selwood, watching the nearest men closely, stood inside the room with his feet on the floor. Pardaloe quickly rehung the curtain.

It was the work of the next moment for Selwood to reel to and sink into an empty chair opposite the sleepy man, and, peering from under his cap, to study the scene.

The interior of the place, of notorious repute even among case-hardened men, was not wholly unfamiliar to Selwood, nor had it changed much in the long interval since he had seen it. Neither Bunty nor Atkins was in sight, and Selwood's nervous glance searched the room vainly for a sight of the one man he had taken a desperate chance to see—Starbuck. Men came at intervals out of the back room, but each one closed the door most carefully behind him. It was there, Selwood soon found reason to believe, that the leaders were closeted.

To attempt the inner room meant, he knew, a showdown. Whatever eyes might be fooled in the front room, those in the back room would not be long in discovering his identity. But with a fatality either temperamental or due to his chance-taking career, Selwood made ready to penetrate the second room in a search for Starbuck.

He pushed guardedly at the head of the man opposite him and found after a little fussing that he was fast asleep. The man wore about his neck a bandanna kerchief, and this, Selwood, keeping his eyes well on those about him, gradually disengaged with one hand—twisting it around to where he could loose the knot and draw it from the man's neck. His victim having taken this liberty good-naturedly, Selwood doffed McAlpin's queer-looking cap at a moment that no eyes were turned his way, and after another moment tried on the sleeping man's hat. It fitted well enough, and he did not take it off; but proceedingly slowly, keeping a clear eye on the men nearest, and handling his right forearm as if wounded, Selwood slipped one arm and then the other out of the coat he wore, and laid the purloined neckerchief over the right forearm.

Drawing his revolver from the scabbard in which he had replaced it when sitting down, Selwood, with the grip of the gun in his right hand, wrapped the kerchief loosely over hand and gun together. When arranged to his liking, he drew his small hunting-knife, and gradually slit the bandage on the lower side from end to end, so that it lay hiding his revolver, but ready to jerk off with his free hand. Putting away the knife, he rose and, facing the room, reached with his left hand up behind him and jerked down the window curtain. Sitting down again, he made a rude sling of the curtain, hung it from his neck under his right wrist, and with his left hand slipped his coat back again over his shoulders. Sitting now quite at ease, he drew a leaf of cigarette paper from a waistcoat pocket, laid it on the table, fished a tiny bag of tobacco from a coat pocket, opened it between his teeth and his left hand, taking advantage of that proceeding to take an extra good look at the men in front of him, rolled his cigarette awkwardly on the table before him, pushed it between his lips, and rose to his feet. He drew his hat-brim evenly down, so it was neither high nor low, but exactly shaded his eyes where he stood, and with the cigarette hanging from his lip, moved toward a noisy group of men and asked the nearest one for a match.

Passing this inspection proved easy. He moved from one to another of the talking groups—some of the men were examining revolvers, others stowing cartridges into various pockets, others adjusting ammunition belts—trading tobacco, boasting, and telling stories; but while Selwood recognized more than one of them either as Calabasas worthies or River quarter "rats," none of them uncovered him.

His apprehension thus fairly well allayed, he made his way in easy measure toward the rear end of the room, where the crowd was thicker. He had approached within a dozen feet of the back-room door and was thinking of just how he should maneuver an entrance, when it was suddenly opened, and out walked Harry Barbanet, followed by the redoubtable Bull Page, whose eyes showed mild stimulation.

The moment was delicate. To turn quickly away would only be, he well knew, to excite suspicion and even invite particular inspection; the utmost Selwood could do was to interrupt a conversation near at hand and ask whether the doctor had come.

Had Bull, the derelict, sold him out—disclosed Selwood's presence and told what he knew of his intentions? The gambler did not believe it. Men on the Rocky mountain frontier staked their lives at times on what would seem very slender chances. But drunkard though Bull was, outcast among outcasts, Selwood would have risked his life that Bull, drunk or sober, would not betray him. The question that rankled in his mind was: Had Barbanet in that brief, piercing glance discovered him? Was it imagination that was already tricking him into thinking so? He could not be sure. But some instinct told him he had been detected and must measure accordingly. The next moment Barbanet, now following Page, passed Selwood without noticing him—and so close on his left that he brushed him with an impatient shoulder.

It needed only an instant for Selwood to reason that this was precisely the way he himself should have acted if positions were reversed; and he knew Barbanet's astuteness too well to believe he would act, in the circumstances, any differently.

Without hesitation, Selwood, taking advantage of Barbanet's broad shoulder, turned promptly to the left, and, falling into step, walked on directly behind the two—third and last man in a procession heading straight for the lower end of the bar.

It seemed strange to find himself heading so briskly in such company and at such a businesslike gait for a corner of the room that he had so good reason to remember. The old archway had been boarded up, and a batten door had been set roughly into it to lead into the barber shop; it was for this door that Barbanet was heading.

Nothing could have suited Selwood better. But just before reaching the door, Barbanet caught Page's arm, told him to stop, and attempted to turn in behind the bar. At this juncture Selwood in turn caught Barbanet's arm and stopped him.

"Don't bother, Harry; you won't need that gun. Face about—keep straight ahead."

Barbanet felt the quick and unpleasant sensation of a revolver muzzle held to the small of his back. A hand with fingers like steel slipped down his forearm and over his left wrist. Without trying to turn his body, he looked back over his shoulder, surprised, but making no pretense of not knowing who spoke.

"First time I've seen you tonight, John," he remarked, quite undisturbed by this situation.

"No," retorted Selwood in like tones, "this is the second time, Harry."

"I noticed you had a long arm on when I passed you," responded Barbanet, less amiably.

"Not for my friends, Harry—there's a good many strangers in town tonight. Open the barber-shop door, Harry—do it quick."

"There's two men behind it with shotguns."

"They're friendly—you're walking right in there ahead of me. Go on! The way we stand now, there's not a man in this room that could tell whose gun went off if you got hurt, Harry. Open that door."

No frontier crook in his senses would choose certain death before a fighting chance. Barbanet knew perfectly well the alternative. Selwood might not himself escape, but his fate would no longer interest Harry. With ill grace, but without imprudent delay, Barbanet advanced to the door, his left wrist gripped in Selwood's left hand.

"Key's in my left-hand pants pocket. Let loose my wrist.

"What's a right-hand man doing with a key in his left-hand pocket?" asked Selwood. "Page," he added, pulling Barbanet's arm back, "take the key out of Barbanet's right pants pocket and unlock that door, quick."

"Page," interjected Barbanet, jerking the words out viciously, "you'd better keep out of this."

Bull Page grinned brokenly. Perhaps the remembrance of old abuse at Barbanet's hands—the times he had come thirsty and broke, and gone from Barbanet's bar thirsty and broke, decided him. At all events, after a rapid search, Bull found the key in Barbanet's right-hand trousers pocket, unlocked the door, pushed it open, and Barbanet, followed by Selwood and Bull, passed through into the barber-shop.

Valuable Wood

Bird's-eye maple is found from Newfoundland to Georgia and westward to the northern shores of the Great lakes, eastern Nebraska and Kansas. When the grain has a pronounced wavy appearance the wood is called bird's-eye maple and is used as a veneer. The forest service says that there is a parasitic growth that gets into the wood of the maple and causes a swelling, which when cut off straight by the saw appears as eyes. This does not harm the wood but makes it more valuable. Generally speaking, this wood is scarce.

FAMOUS MINING STRIKES

By THOMAS E. STEWARD

Colorado Turns to Silver

ALTHOUGH her mining operations began in the usual way, with a search for free gold in the form of nuggets and dust that could be washed from loose gravel or easily crushed rock, Colorado was due to have her main mining wealth developed in the form of silver.

The results of gold mining fell somewhat short of the expectations many had held. In 1864 Gov. R. W. Steele, accompanied by two companions, started from Empire in search of the less precious but, as they hoped, more plentiful metal. In September they discovered the Belmont silver lode on McClellan mountain, the first important discovery of a silver-bearing lode in Colorado. Both the float material, found adjacent to the mine and the ore in the lode itself assayed high in silver. A new era in Colorado mining, one that has lasted down to the present day, was ushered in by this discovery.

Relatively little progress in mining was made as long as the stamp mill was the main means for separating the silver from the ore, but in 1867 a successful smelting venture was begun at Blackhawk. New markets were opened for the ore as a result of the new method, and prosperity increased.

In those earliest days the mines were in remote and isolated regions. Almost none of the facilities enjoyed by modern industry were available to the miners, and swift means of transportation were wholly lacking. Until 1870 the greatest difficulty confronted the miners due to the lack of transportation, and charges for freighting in supplies and hauling out the ore were often ruinous and always excessive.

A remedy for this condition was found when on June 22, 1870, the Denver Pacific railroad was completed from Denver to its connection with the Union Pacific at Cheyenne. And on August 15 of the same year a road then known as the Kansas Pacific also reached Denver. By September a third rail line into Denver, the Colorado Central, had been opened between that city and Golden. This line brought communication with the East to the very entrance of the mountain valley of Clear creek.

During the next three years vein after vein was discovered in the hills about Georgetown, and the district came to have the name "Georgetown Triangle," by which it is still known to geologists. Some of the new strikes were extraordinarily rich and the development of silver mines in the vicinity of Idaho Springs added to the output.

Another panic, that of 1873, far greater than its predecessor of 1859, again affected the mining areas when it reduced the price of silver and again turned many of the hardier miners back to prospecting for gold.

From 1876 on, every year saw far more wealth produced from silver ores than from gold in Clear Creek county. The maximum silver production of $2,839,488 was recorded in 1894. The best single year's output of gold was $931,671, in 1902.

A Canadian Gold Strike

DEEP in the Canadian wilderness, about half way between the point where James bay hangs down from Hudson's bay and Georgian bay shoots off from Lake Huron, lies one of the most valuable deposits of precious metals recently discovered on the North American continent. This is the Porcupine gold field, which was first found in the summer of 1909. Because of the remoteness of the field, its surroundings of rocky hills and deep forests, Porcupine held to a remarkable degree the elements of romance and adventure that traditionally go with the typical treasure hunt.

Perhaps no more than 200 miles southeast of Porcupine lies the famous mining district of Cobalt, which is the principal source of nickel today in all North America. Silver has also been produced at Cobalt in large quantities. And it was due to the presence of many daring miners at Cobalt that the Porcupine field was found.

The presence of free gold, visible in the mineral veins of the rocks, stirred the imagination of those who entered Porcupine soon after the big strikes had been made and fabulous prices were paid for claims. It seemed as though the sight of the rich stuff in its native form excited purchasers more than much richer ore could do when the precious metal was mixed with something else, or disguised in chemical combination.

One claim sold for $350,000, of which $50,000 was paid down and the balance was due in payments of $50,000 a month over a stretch of five months.

More than at most other new gold fields, Porcupine was developed by men with large capital who bought up claims and took a chance that they would be as valuable as they promised. Many of the famous western claims changed hands ultimately at high prices, when they were developed property, but Porcupine was not a place where the small miner could readily go it alone. Perhaps the biggest of the mines that have been developed there are the famous Hollinger and those of the United Porcupine Gold Mines, Ltd. The Dome mines are also near Porcupine.

Too Monotonous

A young man was on a visit to a farm that was "miles from anywhere." At the breakfast table the farmer had talked of the weather, the grass, the stock and the market.

"What do you do for amusement?" the visitor asked. "Wouldn't a radio set be a boon in a place like this?"

"Radio?" murmured the farmer. "Oh, y'mean a wi'less? Well, I dunno."

"Y'see," explained his wife, "after a while it'd get so monotonous."

First Gatherings of Colonists in America

There were three congresses held in America before the first Continental congress of 1774. The first of these met at New York on May 1, 1690, in response to a call issued by the General Court of Massachusetts—"the first call for a general congress in America." The purpose was to confer on "suitable methods for assisting each other for the safety of the whole land." Seven colonies were invited, of which four attended the congress. The congress of 1754 met at Albany on June 19, for the purpose of negotiating a treaty with the Indians, and also to form a plan of union among the colonies. The "Albany plan," sometimes called "Franklin's plan," was submitted to the assemblies of the several colonies through their governors, and to the king through the agency of the lords of trade, but failed of adoption both in the colonies and in England. The congress of 1765, better known as the "Stamp Act Congress," was held in New York city, opening on October 7, 1765.

William T. Casey Married

The news is out. Wm. T. Casey, is married. The popular plumber has finally deserted the bachelor ranks that held him in their grasp, lo these many years. All the pretty maidens in this community for years have been casting shy glances at the good natured sportsman and plumber, knowing him to be a "good catch," but he successfully withstood their winsome smiles and pleading eyes, holding fast to the ranks ,where he cast his lot in boyhood. Finally the little god of love aimed a dart that brought him to the altar. At last he succumbed to the charms of woman, for which all men finally fall, sooner or later. Mr. Casey will not say when the happy event occurred but suffice it to say he will shortly occupy the Nunn cottage on the highway and forever after live happily. Mrs. Casey is from Vancouver, but has resided in this community for some time. She is a very charmand beautiful woman.

Mr. Casey is an expert hunter and fisherman and is an authority on wild ducks. He has spent his whole life in Menlo Park.

A. W. Gale Ill in P. A. Hospital

A. W. Gale is quite ill at the Palo Alto hospital to which place he was taken on Tuesday. His relatives are much alarmed over his sickness, although reports from the institution indicate that he is resting easily with every hope of a speedy recovery. Mr. Gale is one of the best known and best beloved citizen of Menlo Park. His friends, and they are many, earnestly pray that he will soon recover.

Oak Grove Avenue Property Sold

Joeph Veverke, the popular local station agent, has sold his two lots on Oak Grove avenue at a handsome profit to Julius Grimindel, who owns considerable property in town.

Joseph Ahlert, the plumber is becoming quite gay these days in his search for thrills. He has taken the air, and is frequenty seen enjoying a nose dive and a spiral spin in mid air over the town in the latest airplane model. Lindbergh's feat has given local thrillers his complex.

Death of Mrs. Pearl Cornelison

Mrs. Pearl Cornelison passed away at the Loma Linda Sanitarium, near Los Angeles, last Friday. She was the devoted mother of Elmo Cornelison, the popular assistant postmaster here and Richard Cornelison, also residing in Menlo Park. The deceased is survived by her husband and six children. The two sons here and the other members of the family have the sympathy of this community in their sad bereavement. Mrs. Cornelison was a devoted mother, a true Christian, and beloved by all who knew her.

Chicago Banker Visits Here

W. B. Robinson, a prominent banker of Chicago, and his pretty wife spent this week here with Attorney Frank R. Cain and spouse at their attractive home near Santa Cruz avenue. The Cains and the Robinsons were neighbors some years ago in Highland Park, a suburb of Chicago. Mr. Robinson contemplates living in Menlo Park when he retires from active business two years hence. He is delighted with California and particularly the peninsula.

Hundreds Visit Holy Cross

Hundreds visited Holy Cross cemetery on Monday laying flowers upon the graves of their departed loved ones. Every visitor to the burial ground admired its attractive appearance, its well-kept walks, flowers and wonderful setting among the oaks, with the green hills in the distance. Never before has it looked so well. This is due to the liberal supply of funds furnished by surving relatives and through the energy and self sacrifice of George Walsh, who organized a campaign to raise money and who personally superintended the cleaning of the cemetery. The people of this community and particularly those having relatives resting peacefully in the graveyard owe him a debt of gratitude for his wonderful work, done unselfishly for a noble cause, caring for and beautifying the last resting place of the dear departed who in life were loved. It is, indeed, a noble sentiment that actuates a man to give his time, energy and thought without hope or reward or, perhaps, even thanks, to the public for such wraise-worthy work.

SIEMANN DEATH IS CALLED ACCIDENTAL

A coroner's jury which investigated the circumstance leading to the death of Fred L. Siemann, well-known real estate man who was found dead in the seat of his car in his garage last Thursday, came to the conclusion that Siemann came to his death accidentally. The inquest was held Saturday morning at the parlors of the James Crowe Undertaking Co.

Siemann was found in the seat of his car clad in his pajamas by William Nielsen, a neighbor. The story of the finding of the body was told at the inquest. Mrs. Nielsen heard Sieman drive into his garage the night before, and the next morning had noticed that Siemann's door was swining open. She saw in the evening that the door was still open and wondering why it had not been latched sent her husband over when he came home that night. Nielsen went to Siemann's door was swinging open. one answered his knock, entered the house only to find it empty.

In Siemann's bedroom Nileson found his clothes strewed about the room as though he had undressed very hurriedly. He next went to the garage. Here he found Siemann limp in the front seat of his car. He immediately notified the police.

Officer Sylvester Douglas investigated the case, and reported that the car had been running. The ignition switch was still on and the battery was dead when the car was found. Only a small amount of gasoline was left in the tank. An analysis of the dead man's blood was made by J. Murray Luck, professor of chemistry at Stanford. Professor Luck stated that the blood showed unmistakable signs of containing a large percentage of carbon monoxide, a gas formed when combustion of carboniferous materials takes place in a limited amount of oxygen. It is a deadly poison and even a small quantity will cause death.

William J. Dusel, partner of the dead man in the realty firm of Dusel & Siemann testified at the inquest stating that Siemann had seemed to be in good health when he left on a vacation trip with his family for McCloud, Shasta county, a few days before. A sister of the dead man was also questioned concerning her brother. She stated that he had visited her at Richmond on Tuesday, and had refused to eat at her house, saying that he had planned a "feed" in San Francisco on his way home.

It is supposed that whatever Siemann had eaten in the city had caused his an acute attack of indigestion, and that after he had gone to his car to go for help (he had no telephone) and that after he had started the car and before he had driven from the garage he had a fainting spell. While still in a faint he had breathed enough of the carbon monoxide from the exhaust of the car to cause his death.

The widow, Mrs. Maymie Siemann came from McCoud, where her husband had left her and their 4-year-old daughter a few days before. The body was removed to McCloud for interment.

LOCAL REALTOR SCORES ON GREEN

DEATH DRIVER IS FREED FROM PRISON

Harry Court, former society man and auto dealer of Burlingame, was released on parole from San Quintin, where he was serving a 15-year sentence for the death of 13-year-old Freddie Hokamp, this week by order of the parole board. Court was sentenced to San Quintin 14 months ago by Judge Buck. He was given a sentence of 5 years for driving a car while intoxicated and from 1 to 10 years for manslaughter. The sentences were to have run consecutively.

The death of the boy caused quite a stir about the county at the time. The little fellow was just returning from a Boy Scout meeting to show his parents the medal he had won. While riding his bicycle, he was struck and killed by Court's machine.

Court's arrest was delayed several days by his disappearance, and it was believed that his fiance, Miss Vida Sproule, had aided in his concealment. Miss Sproule has since been patiently awaiting the release of her fiance and their wedding is expected soon by their friends.

The release of Court after serving but 14 months of a 15-year sentence has caused considerable comment both adverse and otherwise.

News of Court's release was a shock to the dead boy's father.

"It can't be possible that they have released him," he said. "You must know how bitter I feel in this matter. I have not as yet recovered from the shock of losing my boy. I could never be brought to do anything for Court. I am against the parole, firmly against it. Is there anyone in this world that can blame me?"

"I heard they were circulating petitions for his release — but I didn't believe it — I didn't believe the slayer of my boy would be released from paying the penalty for his terrible deed."

In a statement to the press Judge Buck said:

"I believe that Court deserved he got. It was a case of too much liquor. As to whether he deserved parole or not at this time —I'll leave that to the prison authorities. I don't like to express an opinion on the matter.

BAYSHORE HIGHWAY EXTENSION PROMISED

The extension of the Bayshore highway from Burlingame at Broadway to San Mateo was promised Wednesday by the State Highway Commission at the hearing set for the consideration of the matter in the commission's offices in the State building in San Francisco.

The hearing was attended by representatives of every community along the peninsula, and the matter was ably placed before the commission by speakers representing several of the communities. The people were assured by the commissioners that money was now available for the extension of the road and that the matter would be taken care of immediately.

And then—
let electricity do
all the hard work

JUNE may remind you of the day of days. Or perhaps a day that is coming this month.

But no matter, if you would take care of the hand she gave to you, give her the labor-saving electrical appliances. They do all the hard house work. They wash the clothes and dishes, clean the house, cook automatically, and do innumerable little tedious things that wear a woman so. They preserve the bloom of youth. They give her free hours to spend with the children.

Buy her these electrical appliances for a wedding present or for the anniversary. She will reward your thoughtfulness by being the same youthful pal, always.

HIGHWAY BILLS ARE APPROVED

Financing of the greatest road development program in California's history will begin July 29, when the Breed highway bills, approved by Governor C. C. Young last week, become effective. Under the one cent additional gasoline tax provided in one of these two companion measures, it is estimated that an average of $10,000,000 a year over a period of 12 years will be available for new highway construction. The other Breed bill classifies the state highways as primary and secondary and allocates the funds.

In signing the two bills which assure completion of California's splendid highway system, Governor Young expressed his appreciation of the joint efforts of the California State Automobile Association and the Automobile Club of Southern California in support of this legislation. The governor commended the activities of the two big motoring organizations in bringing the various interests together on a common ground behind an acceptable plan of financing future highway construction.

In a letter addressed to Burton A. Towne, president of the California State Automobile Association, the governor said:

"In placing my signature on Senate Bills Numbers 3 and 518, providing for the completion of our State highway system, I want to congratulate the California Staate Automobile Association and the Automobile Club of Southern California, as well as Senator Arthur Breed, author of the bills, on the successful culmination of their efforts to secure an adequate and equitable highway financing program.

"I wish particularly to call attention to the prompt and hearty support of this road-building program on the part of our State Senate and Assembly. I wish also to commend the leadership of our two great automobile clubs in helping to unite all sections of California behind these constructive pieces of legislation. The overwhelming vote by which the bills passed both houses of the legislature is the best indication of the results your joint efforts have obtained.

"I am especially pleased with the fine spirit of co-operation which has manifested itself in every portion of our Statae, and which in a few short years will serve to complete a highway system of which we may be justly proud. This co-operation, which made possible the successful passage of thes two measures, has given assurance that California will continue to hold its premier position as the motoring paradise of America.

"Yours very sincerely,
C. C. YOUNG,
Governor."

GIRL SCOUTS ENJOY CAMP

The Girl Scouts of the Live Oak Troop spent Saturday and Sunday at Zayante Lakes in the Santa Cruz mountains, as the guests of Leonard & Holt. Transportation was furnished by C. H. Holt of the realty firm.

Eighteen girl scouts made the trip and enjoyed two days of hiking, swimming and camping out.

Mrs. Donald Bogie and Miss Maude Stilleson were the Girl Scout leaders in charge.

BANK OF ITALY NATIONAL TRUST & SAVINGS ASSOCIATION

Californian

—in origin —in progressiveness
—in spirit —in ideals
—in ownership —in patronage
—in management —in scope

The Bank of Italy belongs to the people of California—and it is as typically Californian as the historic Missions founded by the Franciscan fathers. ¶ As this institution has grown in scope—reaching new communities with its banking service—it has become more and more democratic in spirit, because of the increase in the number of its stockholders. ¶ Today, the Bank of Italy is literally owned by the people of the State of California.

In the Market Place

IN certain parts of Europe some centuries ago, the farm laborer was wont to stand in the town market place holding a straw in his mouth as a sign that he was looking for employment.

Today the uninvested dollar places itself in the open market. As to an individual, it must be offered an occupation free from personal hazard, with steady employment and attractive wages.

In providing telephone facilities for nation-wide service, the Bell System has employed millions of such dollars. The savings of more than half a million American telephone users, invested in Bell System Securities, have built the system that serves them. Theirs is an investment in service, and they themselves have served by investing.
